Not illustrated. 1885 Excerpt: . his ears still up and his head slightly turned, looking towards me; the blood was pouring down his trunk from a wound exactly where I had aimed, and, as it was inflicted by a four ounce ball, backed by a heavy charge of powder, I cannot understand why it did not penetrate to his brain; it had half stunned him, however, and saved my life, for, had he come on again, it would have been utterly impossible for me, fatigued as I was, to have avoided him. After standing still for a short time, swaying himself gently from side to side, he again turned and took across the flat. At length this hardy hunter had to confess himself too much fagged out to continue the chase. It had begun at daybreak, and now the sun was getting low. So, very unwillingly, he let the elephant go, and lay down for an hour s rest under the shade of the nearest tree. Then he returned to his companions, who proved to have been no more fortunate than himself. Among them they had not bagged a single elephant. But on the whole, Mr. Selous had no cause to complain of want of sport, for, another day, he got five out of one herd to his own gun, and in the course of three seasons managed to kill seventy-eight elephants, no less than forty-two of them in four months. Elephants, like other wild beasts, are also killed by...
