Romans Repent! is perhaps the first book in sixteen hundred years to argue that Paul s letter to the Romans was not written to Christians, but was a script to be proclaimed to the polytheists of Rome. For the last millennium and a half it has been unthinkable to imagine a Rome that was not dominated by Christian faith, but when Paul wrote this message monotheists were not allowed to live in the city. Even the Jews who dwelt in Rome had become conformed to Roman culture and faith. Paul declared that the mighty deeds of Abraham, David and Elijah would not justify those who incited God s jealousy through their unfaithfulness. Romans Repent! gives new insight into the evangelization of Rome, with special attention to the role of Phoebe, who boldly declared Paul s message to the people of Rome. This commentary provides a new translation of the letter, which brings to life Paul s message about us, the churches, who are hard at work to proclaim the gospel among idolatrous people such as you. What if Romans was not a petition to the churches of Rome, but was a proclamation to all the people of pagan Rome (Romans 1:7)? What if, when Paul warned of the jealousy of God (1:18) and declared that You have no excuse (2:1) and that you are mere humans in the weakness of your flesh (6:19), he was writing to those whom Paul considered to be enemies of the true God? Paul called the people of Rome loved by God, but that did not mean that he thought that they were perfect or good or even Christian. When Paul called...
