Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Diseases and Treatment of the Investing Tissues of the Teeth Before taking up the work for which we are assembled, I wish to express my appreciation of the honor conferred by the University of California in extending to me an invitation to be one of the lecturers of this Institute. I am pleased also to say a few words in commendation of the action of the University of California in adding dental courses to its extension work. It is a compliment to the profession that the importance of our service to humanity is thus recognized, and I trust that these courses will in future years continue to receive the hearty support of the profession. I wish, before this class, to compliment Dean Millberry for having seen the need of courses under University control, by men without the sphere of influence of commercial interests, and for having suggested the plan to the University authorities. Such courses should stimulate the members of the profession to keep closely abreast of the times and improve the general average of dental service. Thus we see that the University of California is promoting a scheme in which the people of the entire State should be interested, for they will in the end be the beneficiaries. The treatment of disease improves with more complete knowledge of pathology. For each disease, we should be able to apply treatment closer to the source, more directly to the cause, or actually to prevent it, as our understanding of the pathology becomes more perfect. We are all familiar with the gradual advancement in the treatment of typhoid fever, especially in the prevention of it by...
