AMBROSE LOOMIS RANNEY The son of Lafayette (Dartmouth 42) and Adeline E. (Loomis) Ranney, was born in Hardwick, Mass., June 10, 1849. His father was a physician in New York City, and he there received the chief part of his preparation for college. He had two years in the public schools of New York, three years in Doctor Smith s preparatory schools, and three years in the College of the City of New York. He entered Dartmouth in the spring of Sophomore year. Immediately after graduation he began the study of medicine in the University Medical College of New York, and at the same time, for some years, carried on the business of teaching, receiving a good salary to pay for his medical education. For one year he was a teacher in the public schools of the city, and for four years was professor of mathematics in the Evening High School of New York. He graduated from the Medical College in 1871, having received two medals for excellent work in surgical preparations. He was immediately appointed, upon competitive examination, to first position as interne in the Bellevue Hospital. From 1872 to 1882 he was lecturer and professor in the medical department of the University of the City of New York; for six years be was professor of anatomy in the New York Post-graduate Medical School; for one year he was professor of anatomy in the medical department...
